

Stewart Holley

Orlando-based mobile device security expert and data security thought leader

Stewart Holley currently serves as Executive Vice President at Orange Lien Data and a decorated military intelligence non-commissioned officer. For more than two decades, Stewart has served as a trusted partner to firms who value his unparalleled expertise. He is also a highly sought after mobile device security expert, known for his ability to identify vulnerabilities, and mitigate the human component of data security. He understands that when it comes to data security the stakes are high, every team member plays a vital role in safe guarding critical information and devices.

His experience and knowledge has been published in articles and training manuals that are circulated throughout the industry. He has spoken at over 300 events on real estate, data security and technology. He holds a master's degree in curriculum development, and a bachelor's degree in history.